

ABSTRACT

A color-coded semaphore system in which an individual wears a semaphore that signals characteristics and interests for social purposes. Each color indicates a specific quality related to the individual, such as, but not limited to, personality type, marital status, religion, politics, the type of person that the individual is interested in meeting, etc. The semaphores indicate the qualities of the individual wearing the semaphore, but also indicate to others what qualities the individual may be seeking, such as, but not limited to, personality type, marital status, religion, politics, etc. The semaphore system can be implemented using a variety of color-coded items, such as jewelry (e.g. rings, necklace's, pendants, pins, tie tacks, bracelets, body piercing jewelry, etc.), or garments using color-coded insignia. Other alternative embodiments allow multiple semaphores to be worn simultaneously to allow a variety of the individual's interests to be signaled. An optional indicia can be used in conjunction with the semaphores to inform other individuals that semaphores are being used.